Hi Team

As Virginia continues her all-American tour (note to self: thoroughly check leave requests before approving) I've got to confess I've got quite into the spirit of pulling together these weekly updates. That was, until I realised with great horror, that week 4 (of 4) of 'in your own words' was last week, meaning I'm going to have create some actual words of my own this week.

Don't forget: The final day of ISIA is next Tuesday. We can't wait to celebrate your graduation and we are really looking forward to seeing all the posters (I'm hearing the rumour of ruthless competition in NW6)

Resource of the week! I don't know about you, but getting my heard around driver diagrams has been one of the hardest bits of my QI journey so far. Luckily I'm not the only one – and turns out there is some really excellent resources out there to help us. We recommend - Understand better driver diagrams: What's your theory? By Brandon Bennet and Lloyd Provost

Edenbridge – Tip of the week! We're setting up Edenbridge training sessions in the very near future (look out for invites from our resident Edenbridge expert - Alex Trew). To make the most of these session make sure you are 1) set up on Edenbridge and 2) have spent some time playing around with the system.

Practice Managers – here is your guide to getting the rest of your team logged on:

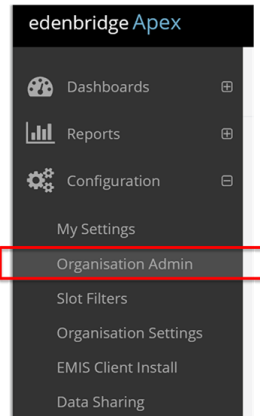

Add a new user on Edenbridge – Apex

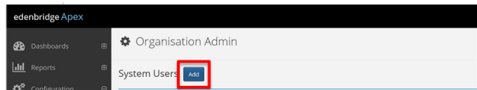

edenbridge Apex

That's all for now folks!

Step 1: In the menu (left side of your screen) select "Organisation Admin"

Step 2: Click on Add button

Step 3: Type the new user email address and click next

Step 4: For standard access tick the 3rd box and select the liked session holder. Then click add

Once this is completed you should see the person details and it's permissions in the system user list

For any Edenbridge request / question please contact Alex Trew alex.trew@nhs.net
